Mr. Jay Morris, Executive Director
President's Executive Interchange Program
1900 E Street, N.W.
Washington, D. C. 20415

Dear Mr. Morris:

The Central Intelligence Agency has a position for which we would like to receive nominations under the President's Executive Interchange Program. This position is located in the research and analysis directorate of the Agency. Specifically, the job could be either as the senior assistant to or chief of the Trade and Monetary Analysis Branch of our Office of Economic Research.

The Chief of this unit directs economic research on world trade and monetary developments, concentrating on the production of economic research reports on international monetary and trade issues with major U. S. economic policy content. The unit maintains and exploits a large, partly automated world trade data base. The incumbent should have several years' experience in international economic analysis, emphasizing increasing responsibility for research design and production of studies on world trade composition and trends, on international monetary developments (including inflation), and on their impact on national and international economic activity. A college background in international economics or finance is desirable, and skill in reviewing economic drafts is needed.

STATINTL Any questions or negotiation regarding this position exchange assignment should be directed to [redacted] of this office. He may be reached on [redacted]

Sincerely,
